EASTERN NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Another Railroad Collision.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., August 28.—A collision occurred on the Vandalia railroad at Macksville this afternoon, by which five persons were badly hurt. An engine with the pay car coming east, jumped the track on account of the spread of the switch and ran into an engine of a gravel train standing on the side of the track. Both engines were totally wrecked and a caboose car telescoped by a tender. The injured will recover.

More Railway Slaughters.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., August 29.—The second Atlantic express train on the Hudson river railroad ran into the first this morning near Peekskill. Three persons were injured.

DETROIT, August 29.—The night express west on the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad last evening, consisting of a baggage car, two coaches, one sleeper and two emigrant cars, became disabled in consequence of the engine blowing the driving wheel off, one mile east of Muir. It was followed by the through freight, which ran into the rear of the passenger train, killing four women and one child, and injuring ten others, all emigrants. Assistance was at once procured from Muir. None of the injured were dangerously hurt. The emigrants are Icelanders.

[illegible] Republican Convention.

JACKSON, August 28.—The Republican Convention met here to-day and nominated Davis (colored) for Lieutenant Governor and Hill for Secretary of State. The evening session has been consumed in balloting without choice for State Treasurer.

Slow Progress of the "Great Eastern."

NEW YORK, August 28.—The cable office in this city has received the following: "The Great Eastern was on the 20th instant in latitude 51° 58' N., and longitude 35° 40' W. The weather was very foggy and boisterous, and out of twenty days they had only sixty-nine hours of working weather. With fine weather Captain Halpine has great hopes of being successful in recovering and repairing the cable of 1865. The cable already picked up is in a good condition."

Death of a Veteran Newspaper Publisher.

PATERSON, N. J., August 28.—Ex-Judge David Burnett, of this city, died this afternoon, aged 72. He was one of the oldest newspaper publishers in the country.

The Veiled Murderess.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., August 28.—Henrietta Robinson, the veiled murderess, has been removed from Sing Sing to the Auburn Lunatic Asylum. She is hopelessly insane.

Short Crops in Europe—Interesting Information from a Leading English Commercial Paper.

NEW YORK, August 28.—The latest copy of the Mark Lane Express received here states that it has, from trustworthy authority, more unfavorable reports of the English wheat crop, which, in many localities, is not expected to equal the very poor yield of last year, and [illegible] of sprouting in the shock from occasional showers. In France storms have done much damage, and a deficiency of at least 10 to 20 per cent. may be relied upon. There are accounts of increased prices at many localities, and in Paris flour has considerably advanced. Old wheat has totally disappeared from the market, and new is supplying its place at higher prices. In Hungary, the condition of the crops has been greatly overrated, and from the prevalence of cholera, and an interference with the work of harvesting threatened in Germany, only an average yield is hoped for. The Express sums up the situation by saying that with a short wheat crop, other [illegible] stocks, and but generally moderate prospects in Europe, low prices [illegible] almost impossible next season.

The International Corn and Seed League recently held in Vienna with an attendance of 1,500 persons formed an estimate that the Austro-Hungarian Empire will report less than usual, say only to the extent of 800,000 quarters in wheat and about 1,100,000 quarters in barley, whereas in a favorable season Hungary alone has reported three times that amount, while the important article of rice is so deficient that imports will be required for consumptive wants.

Charles Schultz, aged 54, last evening shot Mary Hanish, aged 20, who refused to marry him for the reason that he had a wife living. He then shot himself. It is believed that Schultz will die.

Killing of the Notorious Daniel McFarland's Brother.

During a fight late last night in a West 35th street liquor saloon, between John Sharkey and Michael Hagerty, the former fatally stabbed Michael Angelo McFarland, who spent $25,000 on the trial of his brother, Daniel, for shooting Albert D. Richardson. He died last evening in Bellevue Hospital. Having no friends, he was buried in the Potter's field.

Controller Green having allowed John Canning to obtain a judgment against the city by default, and then refused to pay the amount of the judgment, the pictures in the Governor's room were again seized by the sheriff.

Something about Irving, the Self-Accused Murderer of Nathan.

NEW YORK, August 29.—The following facts in reference to John F. Irving, in California, who claims to be concerned in the Nathan murder, were obtained from Chief of Police Donovan, of Hoboken. The Chief states that July 30, 1872, he arrested Irving and Charles Carey on a charge of attempted burglary at the pawn store of Simpson & Co., New York. They were also suspected of robbing the dry goods store of Linder & Co., of laces, which were found in Carey's possession, and for which robbery he is now serving a term at Sing Sing. Irving was admitted to bail, but forfeited his sureties. A few months afterwards, four or five others committed a burglary in the Brooklyn Drug Mills, when he was shot and captured by the night watchman, but escaped from jail by cutting through a partition and lowering himself to the ground. The murder of Nathan was committed on the night of the 28th of July, 1871, and Irving, as will be seen above, was arrested in July following in Hoboken, on another charge.

Murderer Hanged.

CAIRO, August 9.—Wm. C. Campbell (colored) was executed to-day for the murder of Thomas Doyle, mate of the steamer Grand Tower, in last April.

Deery, the Billiardist, Shot.

NEW YORK, August 29.—Jerry Deery, billiard expert, was shot on Tuesday by a fellow-billiardist. It seems that Deery called for the payment of a small debt, which was refused. High words ensued, and Deery struck his debtor, who fired three shots at Deery, one of which took effect in his arm.

The Reported Massacre at Fort Sill.

WASHINGTON, August 28.—Inquiry has been made, both at the War Department and Indian Bureau, concerning the reported Indian massacre at Fort Sill. Officials of the War and Indian offices discredit the report. Two companies of the Tenth Cavalry and several companies of Infantry are at Fort Sill, and it is considered certain that should the massacre have occurred information of it would have reached here by a nearer route than via Waco.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—The Republican State Convention nominated Paul Neuman as member of the State Harbor Commission.

Richard Holt was drowned from the schooner Maggie Johnson on her voyage from this port to Tahiti. He committed suicide.

Irving, who says he was one of the Nathan murderers, still puzzles the officials. The man talks rationally, but complains of constant pain in the back of his head and neck, which he attributes to a wound received while committing a burglary in Brooklyn in June last. Captain Lees considers him insane or playing a trick for some ulterior purpose.

A large meeting of Independent Anti-monopolists was held in the Tenth Ward last night, and was addressed by D. Froidenrich, W. D. Delaney and others.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—Last night a small-pox patient applied at Dr. Toland's office for treatment. He was directed to the Health Office and has not been seen since.

Nicholas Cotter was shot last night in the leg by officer Cook while the latter was trying to arrest him. Cotter fired first at the officer. Cotter is severely wounded,—the officer unhurt.

Eberhardt & Lachman, of this city, receive from the Vienna Exposition the first prize medal on California still and sparkling wines. The Buena Vista Vinecultural Society receives the second prize. The report on wines was made by the celebrated Chemist, Dr. Adolph Ott, at the request of the American Commissioners at the Exposition.

The Columbia River Fishing Company was incorporated to-day for the purpose of fishing in the Columbia river for salmon. Capital stock, $50,000, in 5,000 shares.

There were 3,641 deaths in this city during the year,—2,280 males and 1,361 females. There were fifteen homicides, thirty-five suicides, and two executions.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—The shock of earthquake felt at San Jose at 4 P. M., to-day, was felt here also but was very slight.

Weather continues very warm.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—An affray occurred to-night on the city front between Jas. Wilkinson and Joseph Brown, in which the latter was stabbed and severely wounded. Wilkinson was taken into custody.

Many Democrats of prominence are making a bitter fight against McCoppin for the Senate, on account of his railroad proclivities. The fight on Chief of Police is particularly hot, the contest having taken a religious proscription complexion—most of the Order of Crescents going for Cockerill against Crowley, Crowley in consequence gaining strength from the Democratic side.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—Whipley & Storers' ore reduction works, Main street, were burned this afternoon. Loss, $10,000; insured for $7,000. The fire caught from a quantity of sulphur. Quite an extensive conflagration was threatened, as the surrounding buildings are wood.

Interior California.

SAN JOSE, August 29.—Orrin Dubois, wife and two daughters, Blanche and Alice, charged with the murder of Ah Gim, a China boy, were brought before Judge Senter this morning for examination, after having been confined in jail since Wednesday. Mr. Dubois is a middle aged man, and a farmer by occupation. His daughters are aged about 20 and 22. They, with their mother, remained closely veiled during the examination. None of the family have thus far been called as witnesses. The principal points in the testimony are those given by medical men. Dr. Corey, Coroner, said he could detect no powder marks about the wound, and did not think the person could shoot himself and leave no marks. A paper was exhibited showing powder marks at a distance of 6, 8, 10 and 12 feet. He also said suicide by a pistol shot generally causes a fracture and tearing of the head. This was a clean round cut. The demeanor of the family on hearing the shots, etc., was somewhat conflicting. The examination is still in progress. The evidence is purely circumstantial, and unless the defendants testify against each other it is not probable that they will be held for trial. It is not thought they will be convicted.

Quite a severe shock of earthquake occurred at 10 minutes to 4.

SAN JOSE, August 29.—Later—The examination of the Dubois family is concluded, and defendants discharged.

VALLEJO, August 29.—The ferryboat Carquinez, plying between Martinez and Benicia, last evening burst her boiler. The steamer Lizzie, of Vallejo, is to take her place until the Carquinez is repaired.

The tax-payers have a grand meeting this evening at Eureka Hall.

The ship Comet has arrived at South Vallejo to load wheat, and also the ship Nelson. The latter makes eight wheat vessels the present season.

REDWOOD CITY, August 29.—Quite a severe earthquake shock was felt at this place at ten minutes to four this afternoon.

ELDORADO, August 29.—Col. Jones is now addressing the largest meeting of the campaign at this point. The people are largely represented by delegations from the surrounding country.

SACRAMENTO, August 29.—The jury in the case of Ah Fat, which was locked up last night, had agreed at midnight on a verdict of murder in the second degree. This morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock, one of the jurymen, D. Davenport, was taken suddenly ill and fainted away, and was removed to his residence at 10 o'clock. The remaining eleven jurors were returned into Court by the sheriff, and a verdict without the twelfth being impossible, the Court was compelled to discharge them. The prisoner was remanded back to jail, bail being refused, and will be tried for the third time at the next term.

MISSION SAN JOSE, August 29.—A heavy shock of earthquake occurred here at five minutes to 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Hon. A. C. Henry and Mr. Walker of Oakland are addressing a large assembly to ratify the regular Republican nominations for this county.

CHEROKEE, August 29.—The Spring Valley Canal and Mining Company of this place cleaned up the heads of their sluices and a few undercurrents this week and to-day, and made a shipment of $40,000, the whole sum being run into a single bar of 170 pounds gold weight. It can be seen at Sather & Co's, San Francisco, on Monday. If this monster has ever been surpassed they would like to know it, for there are large reserves in their gravel banks. This firm makes $15,000 from the head flumes since their Butte Creek water came in last month with a light head of water.

NEVADA.

ELKO, August 29.—A number of San Francisco mining experts arrived to-day from Cornucopia, and represent the camp as presenting the most inviting features of any in the State, and denounce statements to the contrary as groundless. Jumping claims have been the main feature in camp since the first locations were made, and through the manipulation of jumpers it was impossible to do any extensive prospecting on the best ledges. A location made by T. A. Freeman was jumped by a party of armed men, who held it and done nothing but break up and ship boulders on top of the ground. Freeman & Co. succeeded in buying them off, paying upwards of $2,000; but hardly had negotiations been consummated, before another armed band jumped the claim and still hold it. Other claims fared the same, and to rid the camp of a nuisance those interested have organized a Mining Vigilance Committee for the purpose of vindicating justice, and after giving timely warning to jumpers to vacate, intend to commence hanging. Upwards of 150 men have been sworn in to serve on the Committee. The only mine in camp being thoroughly prospected is Black Diamond. Down thirty feet it shows a good four foot ledge assaying $400 on an average. The top of the ledge assayed but $150.

RAILROAD SLAUGHTER.

THE RECENT FRIGHTFUL COLLISION NEAR CHICAGO—TWO TRAINS MEET AT FULL SPEED—A TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST OF HUMAN LIFE.

CHICAGO, August 27.—Another of those railroad horrors which periodically thrill the country, occurred Saturday night on the Chicago and Alton Railroad, between Willow Station and Lemont, about twenty-two miles from this city. The lightning express which leaves at nine o'clock every evening for St. Louis, started at the usual hour, and without any premonition of disaster flew on at the usual rate of speed, twenty-five miles an hour. It was Saturday night and many persons were going to the country to spend Sunday, and many others, who had been visiting the city on business, were returning to their homes along the line. The train consisted of a locomotive, a baggage car, a smoking car, two coaches, and two sleeping cars. The cars were well filled, particularly the smoking car. The train was due at Willow Station at 9:55, and was on time. It is not usual for this train to stop at that station, but on this occasion it was necessary in order to take in a sleeping car, which was brought from St. Louis by the train which left that city in the morning. The train started from Willow Station, according to the best of evidence, ten minutes behind, and as it is customary on this railroad to make up for lost time, undoubtedly the rate of speed was somewhat accelerated. The conductor and engineer knew they were to pass a coal train at Lemont, seven miles distant; but unhappily that train did not arrive, as it should have done. It came on toward the passenger train, expecting to make connection at 10 o'clock P. M. at the station. It was a race for life. The conductor and engineer of the coal train knew that the passenger train, laden with precious lives, was in front, and if they did not reach a switch by a certain time a collision was inevitable. Both trains were rushing toward destruction. On they fled over the iron way through darkness, the speed increasing at every revolution of the wheels. The passengers in the sleeping cars were preparing to retire, or had already done so. Those in coaches were looking forward to reaching their destination, where expectant families awaited their coming.

EMBRACE OF DEATH.

The suspicion of danger never crossed the minds of any, when suddenly, without a moment's warning, not even a whistle, the two trains were locked in an embrace of death, and in one terrible moment wives were made widows and children became fatherless. No warning was sent to the threshold of many happy homes, and sorrow that can never be eradicated pierced many hearts. There were three concussions: First, when the engines met and were destroyed; second, when the baggage car struck and was smashed into fragments, and third, when the smoking car collided and leaped into the air, alighting on the fractured boiler of the freight engine. The remains of the passenger train engine were thrown from the track toward the east, and so were the ruins of the baggage car. Then came the smoking car on top of the boiler. The fore part of this car was burst open by the force with which it struck, the hind wheels remaining on the track. On them it stood at an angle of thirty degrees, the passengers imprisoned in the broken iron and wood, while

THE DEADLY STEAM

Came up with terrific force from the boiler below, scalding those whom it touched, instantly peeling off the skin, and causing the most excruciating agony. One moment was sufficient to cause death, but many were there several minutes before being extricated. They breathed the burning atmosphere. One breath was fatal, the inner surface of the chest and lungs being fearfully scorched. As soon as they recovered from the first shock the passengers in the two coaches and in the sleeping cars, who were uninjured, did all they could to rescue the sufferers. This humane work was superintended by Mr. R. R. Hawley of Normal, who was the first to mount the smoking car and begin. With him was a Texan named Magee, who worked nobly. They lifted out sufferers in the rear of the car first, and then placed a plank on which those in the elevated end were slid down. All were handled as gently as possible and laid tenderly on the grass. While this was being done, others lighted a fire, taking for fuel the broken tender and the light shone luridly on the sufferers who were moaning in their agony. The sleeping cars were emptied of passengers, and one by one the wounded were placed in the berths and received such attention as could be given them in the absence of medical attendance. It was hard to know what to do. With all kindness, some of the passengers offered brandy, but a lady who knew how injurious would be its effect prohibited the use.

Mr. Hawley says the collision occurred at 10:10, and when all the sufferers were in the sleeping car he took out his watch and found it a few minutes after midnight. The help that had been sent for immediately after the disaster had not then arrived, and the scalded sufferers were enduring

INTOLERABLE TORTURE

Soon after an engine came from Lemont bringing four physicians, but when they came they could do little or nothing. Supposing they would be called upon to give surgical aid, they came equipped with surgical instruments, which were not required, and the liniment and oil which were so badly needed were still three miles away at Lemont, and the engine was sent back for them. In the meantime, the doctors examined their patients, and did the best they could with the meagre appurtenances at hand. They called for bandages, and one noble woman, Mrs. McCord, of Bloomington, tore her underskirt into strips until it was exhausted. Then sheets were torn, and opiates and anaesthetics administered to give temporary relief. As soon as the train from Lemont returned the wounded were made more comfortable, and about three o'clock in the morning another train from Chicago, with the officials of the road and a reinforcement of doctors, reached the scene. There was but little murmuring among passengers. A few broke out in words of indignation against the officers of the road for what they conceived to be the unreasonable delay in the arrival of assistance; but generally those who escaped were too much concerned about the wounded, and too busy in attending to their wants, to attend to anything else.

THE CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT

Was the inexcusable foolhardiness of the conductor of the freight train in leaving Lemont when he knew that it was a matter of life and death; that it was a mere chance if he could reach a switch in time; that it was his duty to remain there until the passenger train, which had the right of way, was safely by, and that, anyway, he had no right to run any risk or take any chances. Mr. Huston, station agent at Lemont, entreated him not to leave the station, and so uneasy was Mr. Huston when he did leave, that he listened until he heard the concussion and then he went to work to secure the necessary aid. The night was dark, the sky cloudy, the waning moon shed no light. The stars were visible overhead, but a thick fog covered the surface of the earth and light could not be seen for any great distance; but it made no difference, however. With the same reckless management of the freight train the accident might have occurred in the full blaze of noon-day. There would be nothing to prevent it. A curve in the road hid the trains from each other, and the engineers could do nothing to stop their engines. In this case nothing seems to have been attempted. There was many a deed of heroism there to lighten this gloomy tale. They say the ridge near which the accident occurred takes its place in the history of railroad massacres side by side with Carr's rock, Angola and other places made memorable by disasters.

The train did not catch fire, as was reported this morning, and all the passengers killed or injured were in the second-class car, which was also used as a smoking car, and with the exception of firemen and engineers and the train men, the casualties were all caused by steam. None of the regular passengers coaches or sleepers were thrown from the track or in any way injured, and none of them hurt.

STATEMENT OF OFFICERS.

The following account of the accident is from a statement of the officers of the road: The regular passenger train for St. Louis left here at 9 P. M., and consisted of baggage car, express, three day coaches, (the head one a second-class or smoking car) and two sleepers. At 10:20 P. M., when three miles north of Lemont and about twenty-two miles south of this city, at a curve in the road, suddenly appeared a coal train of thirty-five cars, running at the rate of twenty miles an hour. The passenger train was running at the rate probably of thirty miles an hour, and neither engineer saw the other's engine until it was too late to reverse—a fact accounted for by a curve in the road, and partly by a dense fog. The two came together with fearful force. Each being on the curve, however, each engine left the track and passed the other, that attached to the coal train striking the baggage car a few feet from the end and shoving it off the track, breaking the coupling between it and the smoking car, which the engine struck square in the end, and with such force as to throw the forward end in the air, so that the engine ran under it, tearing the floor completely out and hurling fifty or sixty unfortunates who were in the car in a struggling mass to the lower end, where there was no chance for escape. Now a scene of horrors which cannot adequately be described. The smoke-stack and dome of the engine were knocked off by the collision, and the broken timbers of the smoking car penetrated the boiler, letting loose a dense volume of hot steam, which poured into the car, blinding and scalding the helpless inmates, who with heart-rending shrieks struggled vainly to extricate themselves. Meanwhile, Conductor Russell of the passenger train, who was unhurt, and a number of passengers from the rear coaches, came forward and endeavored to assist the poor victims, but there was little left to do beyond taking from the wreck the dying and wounded. Of the many who were fearfully scalded seven died soon after they were taken out, and four have since died. The point where the accident occurred is near what is known as Sagatow marshy meadow, about half way between Lemont and Willow Spring station, and not a house in the neighborhood.

[Late telegraphic dispatches place the number of killed and wounded at 51. Of these 17 are dead and many others fatally injured.]

MODOC FAITH.—Joaquin Miller, in his new work "Life Among the Modocs," relates the following anecdote which may contain an instructive lesson for practical Christians:

I had a pocket Bible with me once. I was young, enthusiastic, and anxious to do a little missionary business on my own responsibility. I showed it to the chief, and undertook to tell him what it was.

"It is the promise of God to man," I said, "His written promise to us, that if we do as he has commanded us to do, we shall live and be happy forever when we die."

He took it in his hand, upside down, and looked at the outside and inside very attentively.

"Promises! Is it a treaty?"

"Well, it is a treaty, perhaps; at least, it is a promise, and He wrote it."

"Did it take all of this to say that? I do not like long treaties on paper. They are so easy to break. The Indian does not want his God to sign a paper. He is not afraid to trust his God."

"But the promises?" I urged.

He pointed to the new leaves of the trees, spears that were bursting through the ground, handed me the book gruffly, and said no more.

A NEW TRANSPORTATION SCHEME.—The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle has hit upon a new way of cheap transportation. It says that along the whole length of the Erie canal, with the exception of the rocky channel above Lockport and some [illegible] cuttings, there run two broad [illegible] embankments, the tow path and the [illegible]; the former is graded and ready for [illegible] railway track, the latter might be put [illegible] same condition at a comparatively light expense. On these splendid road-beds the rails might be laid, and, during the summer season, freight engines could be set to work on the different levels to do the towing instead of the mules now employed. It would be a glorious sight to see locomotives going each way with canal boats in lieu of cars. The capacity of the locks would be then the only limit to transportation, and if the influx of business which the advocates of enlargement anticipate should come, the facility for lockage might easily be increased. When navigation closed, and the railroad monopolists, with their usual sardonic delight, ran up their rates of transportation from 15 to 50 per cent., the improved Erie canal, metamorphosed into a double-track freight railway, could still compete with them.

OREGON.

Elk City is to have a six month's school, commencing in September.

Fifteen horses are in training at Albany for the approaching Linn county Fair.

The Albany Register has just closed its fifth volume. It has adopted the cash system and will make a still better paper in the future than it has been heretofore.

Metzler's chair factory, in Jefferson, will this fall turn out an immense lot of those serviceable raw-hide bottom chairs.

Joseph Audette, of Napierville, Canada, aged about 14 years, can hear of something to his advantage by addressing John Kelly, of Oregon City.

Messrs. Logan and Bryan, Yaquina, one evening last week, slew a cougar for supper, and the next morning muzzled another for breakfast—both from the same tree.

The Odd Fellows of Albany and their friends will have an excursion by rail to Latham, on Pass Creek, at the head of the Willamette valley—some twenty miles beyond Eugene.

The subscription paper for the building of the bridge at Lafayette is still being circulated, with every prospect for success. The county districts have not been fully canvassed as yet.

Mr. L. Kline, of Albany, while riding out to the depot last Friday to take the cars for San Francisco, accidentally fell from the stage and was severely hurt by the wheels passing over his legs.

Assessor Davis assessed the railroad in Yamhill county at $7,000 per mile. The representatives of the company were before the County Board for a reduction. The Board determined to let Mr. Davis' estimate stand.

A McMinnville boy swallowed a yellowjacket the other day. It "kicked" on the wind-pipe as it went down, but soothing appliances of salt and saleratus, by the hands of a skillful doctor, soon fixed him all right.

Several suspicious characters are loafing around Oregon City. Anonymous letters have been received by some of the citizens, threatening them with destruction of property if they will not dispose of their Chinamen.

Salem's boys are precocious. One of them, about 13 years old, "nipped" a horse, saddle and bridle which had been left by the owner at the gate of Mr. T. McF. Patton, a few nights ago. The lad is to be arrested and tried for larceny.

A Yamhill farmer named Durham made three revolutions around the tumbling-rod of a threshing machine a few days since, at the rate of 800 revolutions per minute. Two more "revolutions" would have wound him and his earthly career up at the same time.

Halleck Griffen, oldest son of Dr. Griffen, of Albany, in some manner caught—or at least the seat of his pants caught—by the tumbling-rod of a thresher, tearing a hole in the pants big enough to drive a four-horse wagon through. A narrow escape.

The apportionment of school funds for Linn county for the six months ending September 1st, 1873, has been made by districts. The whole amount apportioned is $4,835 00, of which $2,773 90 is coin, and $2,061 10 currency. The amount per scholar is $1 10; per cent of currency, 43c.

We learn that on Monday last, Captain Powell had a fine team drowned at the Dayton ferry. He was descending the hill to the boat with a heavy load of lumber, when the brake gave way, the wagon lurched forward, and the horses, not being able to control it, were crowded quickly into the river and drowned.

The man Charles Miller, arrested at Jefferson last Tuesday for shooting Albert Slater, was held to answer in the sum of $1,000. The ball from Miller's revolver entered Slater's right breast, striking the seventh rib and passing into or through the pluro, but he still lives, with about even chances to recover.

On the 28th inst., as Mr. Redham, of Brownsville, was riding towards the threshing machine, a horse just ahead of him pulled down a post to which he was hitched, and ran, rendering unmanageable the animal he was riding, which threw him with great violence to the ground while, as if to add insult to injury, the horse attached to the post ran over him, inflicting sever but, is it hoped, not fatal injuries.

The Albany Register says: The attendance at the Republican primary in this city last Saturday was the smallest within our knowledge, seventeen being the highest vote cast for any delegate. The following gentlemen were elected delegates to the Republican County Convention: M. C. George, S. Lawson, Geo. F. Simpson, W. S. Newbury, N. B. Humphrey, L. Elkins, Benj. Turley, J. Hannon, C. Mealey, Coll. Van Cleave.

The Salem Statesman says: "This summer, through the untiring exertion of Dr. H. Carpenter, a building to be known as the Oregon Home for the Sick has been commenced and will be pushed forward to an early completion. A block of ground was purchased from the Willamette University, situated in the southeastern part of the city, on the corner of State street and the street on which the O. & C. R. R. line runs. The site selected is on high ground, in a healthy locality and one of the pleasantest portions of the city.

The Enterprise says: "A most daring robbery was perpetrated in Oregon City last Saturday evening. As we learn the case, about 11 o'clock on that evening two masked men effected an entrance to the sleeping apartment of Mrs. M. H. Kelly, which is directly in the rear of her store on Main street, presented a pistol to her head, and threatened to shoot if she made any noise or refused to deliver up her money. She had in her room $480 in currency, which the robbers obtained and left with. This, we believe, is the most daring robbery ever perpetrated in our city, occurring as it did at such an early hour in the evening, and the house being situated in the most central part of town. It is to be hoped that the thieves may be detected."

We have received a poster by mail announcing the next State Fair. From it we learn that the Fair will be held at the Fair Grounds, Salem, will commence on Monday, October 6, and will continue six days. This year the State Agricultural Society offer gold and silver medals in addition to premiums amounting to over $10,000, one for meritorious exhibitions. Rev. Thomas Condon, of the Dalles, will deliver the Annual Address which will take place on Thursday, October 9. It is hoped and expected the State Fair of 1873 will be a gigantic success, and the Society has spared no pains to make it such. Prices for admission are fixed as follows: Six-day tickets, $2 00, membership badge, $3 00, one day tickets, $1 00, ladies, and children under 12 years of age, free.

Despatches from Alexandria give the particulars of the loss in the Red Sea, near the eastern entrance, of a freighting steamer from Singapore and Shanghai for London. The captain, officers and some of the crew were lost. Thirty-six of the men reached land but fell into the hands of the Somandees, a Mohammedan tribe on the shore of the Gulf of Aden, and are held as prisoners.

THE TERRITORIES.

Denver is being fleeced by a hundred thieves and Denver makes up the loss in return by fleecing tourists.

In Salt Lake during the month of July five persons passed to the other side of Jordan through the medium of six-shooters.

An effort is being made to have the name of Mt. Rainier changed back to original Indian, Tacoma. All this comes from the railroad fever at the new city by the sea.

Yale students are gathering geological specimens along Green Griver. A day or two since they found a large petrified animal, closely resembling the South American tapir.

Tacoma has a boot-black, but the editor of the Tribune is thankful that the people are not as thickly crowded as they are in New York City. They might be, if they were all put into a small room.

On Friday of last week twenty-five Indians fired on a wood train in Bull Canyon, eighteen miles southwest of Rawlins. The train men promptly returned the fire, and the reds got up and dusted. No one killed on either side.

The Y. T. Transportation Company propose to construct a free road to the head of navigation on the Yellowstone, provided the F. P. R. R. Company will demonstrate its navigability to a point within 200 miles of Bozeman.

Arrangements have been made with the O. S. N. Co., N. P. R. R. Co., Coggans' stage line, Starr's line of steamers, and Capt. Wright, of the Zephyr, to pass representatives to the Grand Lodge of I. O. G. T., to be held in Olympia, September 10th, over their lines at half-fare.

Mr. Mead, General Manager of the Northern Pacific, informs the editor of the Duluth Herald that the company will grade their road this fall some thirty miles beyond Bismarck, to the coal beds beyond the Missouri. The locomotives on the Dakota Division are now run with coal brought from the East by the lakes.

The Echo says: "Hon. John W. Brazee, Chief Engineer of the O. S. N. Co., commenced the survey of a new railroad around the Cascades, on the Washington side, on Thursday last. When the Northern Pacific Company commence the construction of the section of road east from the mouth of Snake river, the materials will have to be transported up the Columbia, and the present road will be insufficient to make the portage. This new piece of road will no doubt ultimately be a part of the through line."

The proposition of the Olympia Mining and Railway Company to the citizens of Thurston county, as made by the agents of the company, is as follows: 1. If the transfer of lands is made to our company by the Northern Pacific Railroad, it will be satisfactory; if not, all contracts will be annulled until the same amount of donations are made direct to us. 2 and 3. If the popular vote of this county is favorable to issuing of bonds, we will commence work within sixty days thereafter, and when Congress legalizes the donation of county bonds we will agree to complete the road on or before July 30, 1874. 4. We will locate the passenger and local freight depots of Olympia and Tumwater within one-half mile of Main street, on the line of our road, at such a point as the citizens of the respective towns may designate, but reserve the right to locate our general freight depots and wharves. 5. The road will be a first class road, of not less than three-feet gauge. 6. We will accept $150,000 county bonds, bearing 10 per cent. interest, on the completion of the road. Said bonds to be payable in from 10 to 25 years, and to be delivered to us immediately on completion of the road.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 30, 1873.

LEGISLATIVE CORRUPTION AND THE PENNSYLVANIA NOSTRUM.

It has not escaped the attention of honest observers that the "body politic," of which stump orators tell us, is afflicted with a deadly disease. We know what it is. There are unmistakable symptoms, and amid all the variety of schools of medicine and doctors there is little disagreement on the diagnosis. We see the hand of gold outstretched in our halls of legislation, and understand thoroughly the significance of the Representatives' hearty clasp; nay, even more, we can sometimes catch faint glimpse of the yellow lustre which always leaves its stain on the greedy palm. Nor is there any divided opinion on the prognosis of this disease; we can, "guided by the lamp of experience," trace the course and termination of the fatal malady to its only result: the death of our institutions—a national grave. Every member of the great body is infected.

Over in Pennsylvania a caucus of doctors sat, gravely watching the uneven pulse of their constituents. However disgraceful the fact might be, they did not dare deny that their patient was in a critical situation. After long vigils and inscrutable nods they prescribed this recipe:

Section 2. Within twenty days after the adjournment of the General Assembly sine die, every member of the House of Representatives and every Senator whose term will expire at the next general election, shall take and subscribe, before some officer qualified to administer oaths, the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that, as a member of the Second Assembly, I have supported and obeyed the Constitution of this Commonwealth, to the best of my knowledge and ability. I have not knowingly listened to corrupt private solicitation from interested parties or their agents, nor have I received any gift, or promise of a gift, from any such parties, or from any candidate. I have not voted or spoken on any matter in which I had, or expected to have, a private interest. I have not done, or willingly permitted to be done, any act which would make me guilty of bribery. I have observed the order and forms of legislation as prescribed by the Constitution, and I have not knowingly voted or spoken for any law, bill or resolution which I knew or believed to be inconsistent therewith."

The oath is to be subscribed and kept on file. Should any member fail to take it, as above provided he is to suffer disqualification for holding office; or if it be discovered that he has sworn falsely ho is subject to the same penalty. We suppose this oath will accomplish just as much as any oath can. But we are inclined to believe that it is not a sovereign remedy. The Pennsylvania physicians have mistaken the origin and location of the disease. Or, rather, they have undertaken to treat the immediate patient—the legislature—instead of going back to the primitive source, the seat of the disorder—the people. The root of the disease is in character, and no medicine will effect a cure that does not attack it just here. Governor Palmer, of Illinois, said in a speech the other day: "I have no patience with these complaints of the people about dishonest politicians. The people can have honest men in office if they want them badly enough to elect them." That is the whole truth tersely expressed. A sturdier conscience is what the people of Pennsylvania need. It is the lamentable truth that the public opinion of that State, does not dishonor the man of vicious political practices. And so in other States and other communities, it is customary for each party to condemn the vices of the other. But very generally this condemnation stops just here. It has become pretty evident that this mutual berating does not exalt the moral tone of the people; it does not create public virtue, and that is what is wanted.

The Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention was composed of able men and honest, as Pennsylvania honesty goes. They were doubtless sincere in prescribing their remedy, but it seems clear that they have erred. The legislator who will take a bribe, and so betray his trust, will not scruple at taking a false oath. The Pennsylvania nostrum may serve as a disinfectant by protecting those who have not caught the contagion, but it can never become a remedy. Build your constitutional bulwarks never so high, throw around your representative any number of massive legal impediments he will overleap them all. The seeds of disease are in the moral atmosphere and the winds of heaven shall carry them over every barrier to crime. If these eminent gentlemen of the Convention had gone home to preach a new gospel of human virtue, to create a public sentiment that will neither countenance nor reward the corrupt politician, to warn the people against promoting to or sustaining in power any man who can not show an unsullied reputation, they would have found the elixir of national life. There is a comatose public conscience:—let them awaken that. So long as the people of Pennsylvania or any other State elevate corrupt men to office and then attempt to cure them of their corruption, they will find themselves cheated, and the politicians, at the end of their terms just as much diseased as ever. People of every condition know enough to discern that denunciation of corruption in the abstract, illustrated by close companionship with and laudation of disreputable men when they are in office or are candidates for office, is patent insincerity. The Pennsylvania doctors have chosen to tranfer the fight against political wickedness from the ballot-box to the constitution. They will only dull the edge of their weapons. And nothing is surer than that every American citizen must be his own physician. Unclean hands have touched the holy vessels of American legislatures. They have defiled even the ark of the national covenant. But the hands that uplifted them to high position and sacred trust were also unclean.

It seems that His Excellency, Gov. Grover, has again made a demand on the General Government for the delivery to the State of Oregon of certain Modoc prisoners. Governor Grover asks for the surrender of such of Capt. Jack's band as are charged with grave offenses, other than those now under sentence of death, that they may be tried under the laws of our State for such offenses. We are informed that an answer within ten days may be expected.

Among the awards at the Vienna Exposition, we notice one to the Northern Pacific Railway Company for maps

To gentlemen of leisure anxious to escape the slow-moving morality of provincial life or thirsting for the lively days of "49" we can confidently recommend New York as a place of residence. There the market for crime is always supplied with the weirdest, cruellest sensations a prolific district can afford. Murder succeeds murder with a regularity no longer startling. Parricide, matricide, fratricide,—these and kindred horrors follow with a rapidity that sometimes sets one's brain in a whirl and compels the doubt—"Do we live in a Christain land?" This is no exaggeration. Consider one day's awful record of crime in New York City, as narrated by a metropolitan journal: Yesterday, a man named Leslie stabbed another man in the hip; Elizabeth Wallace struck her father-in-law with a knife; a man was knocked down in Eighth avenue; in Seventh avenue a man was found insensible, bleeding from the nose and mouth; at the Sturtevant House a porter was badly cut by a blow from an ice-pitcher; and in Tenth avenue a man named James Brown was stabbed in two places. Such is the way in which Sunday was spent by some of our dear Christian brethren. Meanwhile we are sending annually to foreign lands thousands of Bibles, millions of money and missionaries by the squad.

Now is the time for the high-spirited citizen to brace himself against the periodic assaults of the sewing-machine man with flexible voice sounding the praises of machines that "won the highest gold medal at the Vienna Exposition of 1873." A cablegram uttered the joyful news that owing to the large number of competing machines, no award was made. This, it seems, was premature, as the following dispatch from Hartford, Conn., indicates:

A special dispatch received in this city announces that in the awards at the Vienna Exhibition made this day Hartford has received the highest awards in sewing-machines (the Weed).

Perhaps this won't hinder the inevitable; probably it will not, as the inevitable (in sewing machines, pianos, et id omne genus rei) has an ugly habit of transpiring. The deluge is at hand. It cannot be shunned. But "forewarned, forearmed." By the way, the same dispatch hints at an antidote for this thing: "In firearms Sharp's revolvers received the highest premium."

Hon. S. S. Cox—"Sunset" Cox—has been unanimously nominated by the German Democratic citizens of the Sixth Congressional District of New York, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. James Brooks. The Washington Chronicle greets him heartily, saying: "When the genial 'Sunset' left the halls of legislation with the Forty-Second Congress he carried with him the warmest feelings of friendship of men of both political parties. It is pleasant to know that, if a Democrat is to triumph, it is to be Mr. Cox, who will find hosts of friends in Washington to congratulate him upon his return." The Record of the Forty-Third Congress will be amusing beyond its wont. There are broad and ample themes for "Sunset's" sparkling humor.

If a prominent exchange is to be believed, the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Jersey City, is a belligerent society and exceeding hard to please, withal. We read that Rev. D. G. Gunn, who has just been compelled by the wardens to resign, is the third pastor, within a very brief time, who has failed to give satisfaction. A stormy conflict several nights since resulted in the summary dismissal of the shepherd, with nine-tenths of the flock, and a goodly proportion of pew cushions, hymnbooks and other apparatus of worship. This remarkable secession is attributed to some trifling difference of opinion in the matter of sermons, and an utter subversion of the command, "Be ye one even as my Father and I are one."

"Brick" Pomeroy is wandering through the wilds of Texas, his tireless tongue wagging in this fashion:

I believe it to be as impossible for the principles of Democracy to triumph by the election of Greeley as it would have been for you to secure wedded bliss by courting a lady for five, ten, or fifteen years, and then popping the question to the hired girl of your neighbor across the way.

Rather rough on Liberal Republicanism to be stigmatized as the "hired girl across the way!"

INSURANCE.

INSURE AGAINST LOSS BY FIRE

IN THE

Phœnix of Hartford,

BECAUSE:

FIRST—IT HAS COMPLIED FULLY WITH THE Oregon State Law.

SECOND—Its contracts in Oregon are backed, under a re-insurance contract, by its own and the united assets of the

Home Insurance Company

OF NEW YORK, AND THE

North British and Mercantile Ins. Co.

OF LONDON,

AGGREGATING OVER

$22,000,000 GOLD

offering the best security of any Fire Insurance Company or Association in the world.

THIRD—It can carry large risks, as its policies are re-insured by the above mentioned Companies, so that the PHŒNIX alone can carry the same line that all three companies would take separately.

FOURTH—It requires but one set of proofs in case of loss, thus giving the security of three Companies without the trouble of dealing with separate Corporations.

On these solid merits, viz: Capacity to carry the largest risks, the amplest possible security, the simplest adjustment in case of loss, and the prompt and equitable payment of all just claims,

The Phœnix Insurance Company solicits your Patronage.

DISCHARGED.—In speaking of the two men—David Wright and a man named Warren who were arrested in this city some days ago and taken to Oregon City charged with the murder of J D Robins who was killed last spring in Clackamas county—the Enterprise says "There is a great deal of feeling in this community to get the person or persons who committed the murder and no sooner was the fact known that the arrest had been made than our citizens became very much excited and hoped the right ones had been arrested But they became thoroughly disgusted when the examination took place as this man Dougherty had not the least evidence against the men he had arrested and they were promptly discharged on motion of the District Attorney On Tuesday this man Dougherty had Mike McCormick arrested and it resulted the same as the other cases This man John Dougherty professes to be a detective and is well calculated to deceive the people He has shown his hand in this matter and the general verdict is that he is unfit for the character he assumes and unworthy of any confidence whatever The two first men he knew were innocent and what his object was in having them arrested we cannot tell But the supposition is that he was working for the reward and would as soon have hung an innocent man as a guilty We are informed that he offered $100 to one of the men to swear against the other, but failed to find a tool to help him in his foul work John Dougherty is well known in Oregon and where he is it would not be well for him to attempt to establish a reputation

A MAN MISSING.—Last Tuesday evening a young man named C E Clark, a school teacher by occupation, started across the Columbia river from the mouth of Hood river to the mouth of the White Salmon He started in a small sail boat alone Not returning on Tuesday evening, some misapprehensions were felt by his friends. Wednesday forenoon as Clark still did not return several persons started in quest of him They crossed the Columbia and steered directly for the mouth of the White Salmon Floating in the mouth of this stream they found the boat in which Clark had sailed The boat was found resting on an even keel, and to all appearances had not capsized as a dipper and some other light articles were found lying in the bottom of the craft undisturbed Some distance away the mast, and sails attached, were found also floating on the surface of the water Diligent search was made for Clark along the stream for some distance but not the slightest vestige could be discovered As the boat evidently had not upset, the question of his whereabouts is involved in obscurity There can be but little doubt that Clark was drowned and his continued absence is a source of anxiety and alarm to his friends Clark was in poor health and of a rather melancholy temperament and it is thought that he has committed suicide in a fit of despondency He was about 23 years of age and unmarried. For several years he has been engaged in teaching school Formerly he lived at Oregon City Search was being made for him at last accounts, but without avail

FELL IN.—Some people never profit by experience and the sad examples of others, that water, like powder, is a dangerous thing with which to experiment. The boys of Portland are proverbial for their reckless daring in venturing about the water Occasionally we are called upon to chronicle an instance where some foolhardy boy falls a sacrifice to his temerity, but still boys go ahead incautiously and seem to vie with each other in acts of risk and venture. Every day we observe numerous urchins ranging in years from five to twelve, playing in the water or paddling about in skiffs, and the wonder is that one is not drowned daily Yesterday afternoon a small urchin, while experimenting a little at the foot of Stark street, narrowly escaped death by drowning. He was running to and fro on a small log which lay in the water near the pontoon, when suddenly it turned and threw the "shaver" into the water Just at that instant Mr. Wetmore who hauls water came down to fill his cart. He perceived the danger of the situation and sprung to the rescue By the use of a long pole he managed to save the boy, but not until [illegible] thoroughly wet and badly frightened Where he fell in, the water is nearly fifteen feet deep This boy very narrowly escaped a watery grave, but the example, like many others which have already been furnished will [illegible] no salutary effect in inspiring a greater degree of caution among those incipient specimens "of the genus "Hoodlum "

HANDSOME TOKEN.—The editor of the Bulletin, James O'Meara was made the recipient of a handsome, substantial token of esteem and friendship by his numerous friends on Thursday evening. A delegation of gentlemen, headed by S J McCormick visited the gentleman at his sanctum and gave him a cordial invitation to attend a social gathering of his friends above the confectionery store of Schmeer Bros Mr O'Meara courteously complied with the request and repaired to the room On his arrival he was presented by Mr McCormick with a small, beautiful, gold-headed cane in behalf of the gentlemen present, as an earnest of their admiration of his talent, and a testimonial of their respect and esteem of him as a gentleman and friend Although completely taken unawares, the recipient accepted the token, and in a few time, appropriate remarks tendered his thanks for the beautiful gift. Several gentlemen present made brief speeches suitable to the occasion Champagne and wine flowed freely, and an hour or [illegible] was spent in the most convivial manner. The cane presented is made of the finest material; the handle is of pure gold, handsomely ornamented with [illegible] and delicate scroll work, while the end of the stick is filled with rich auriferous quartz On the handle is the following inscription "Presented to James O'Meara of the Portland Bulletin by his many friends, August 28th, 1873 "

SAILED.—The steamer Oriflamme sailed last evening for San Francisco with the following passengers Miss Nellie Down, Mrs Schulz and three children, J Selling, Jos Freeman, Capt Nasau, S B Cannon, J F McNaught Mrs Emma Miller, Miss Upton Miss Mack Mrs T G Robinson, Miss Martin, Miss F S Starr, I Strauss S Seller S Falk, B F Underwood, A Goldsmith and son Miss Mary S Hughes, W Smith and wife H King, wife and child Emil Frank Henry Ackerman, H [illegible], Ben Brumauer, T Breslauer, L Fan [illegible], I T Sharp, Geo H Clark, C Wallace, Mrs LaMar, W L Huggins Dr David Wall L Hart, P J Martin I H Mugler P Goldsmith, M Harris P I Bradford A Hubbard, Rev B Gray, Mrs E W Morley Mrs Baber Miss Margaret Block, Col F A Bee, Rev W H Brantner, E Belden Backus and wife, J M Langlucker and wife, Mrs Mary A Brown Mrs Loui Wm W Finley and wife W F & Co s messenger and 50 in the steerage

REPORTED DEAD.—Yesterday a report was in circulation that Mr John Everest the well known musician of Portland had died on Thursday last at Dayton. So far as we were able to ascertain the rumor originated from no very authentic source, but as Mr Everest was stopping at Dayton at last accounts and was in poor health, there may be some truth in the sad intelligence With others of his many friends we sincerely trust that the report may be without foundation Mr Everest has resided for many years in Portland and has been regarded as among the best musicians in the State Some years ago he organized the Mechanics Brass Band, and was leader of the same until its disbandment Among the musicians of Portland and of the State he has ever been held in high esteem as an honored member of the profession We hope the report may prove incorrect

FILLING UP.—Work on the iron fence in front of the Court House has temporarily been suspended but still the reporters are able occasionally to refer to the progress being made in that line and to the improvements going on there For the last four or five days a number of persons with teams and carts have been engaged in hauling loose earth and filling up the depressions that exist at the corner of the [illegible] near the stone wall The block has been filled up level with the wall with the rich black loam which will soon be sowed with clover It will not be many months before the Court House block will present its wonted green appearance

"YOU AND I"—This is the title of a new song just issued by M Gray of San Francisco It was composed by Clarib and is sung by Mr Alfred Wilkie of the Bishop Troupe with great success

CHURCH NOTICE.—The congregations worshiping at St Stephen's and at the Mission Chapel are hereby notified that in consequence of the consecration of Trinity Church in the morning and the Missionary Convocation in the evening in the same place there will be no Divine service in either of the above churches to morrow On Sunday the 7th of September the usual services will be held including the Holy Communion in the morning, and the Choral Service in the afternoon The children of the Sunday School will assemble punctually at half past two as usual

JOHN ROSENBERG Chaplain

GONE TO OLYMPIA.—M J H Church accompanied by Madame Stevenson the talented vocalist will start this morning for Olympia An entertainment will be given at that place next Monday evening From that point Madame Stevenson will make a professional visit of the Sound and British Columbia From Victoria she will again visit Portland giving one or more performances and then proceed up through the valley Miss Stevenson is a thorough artist and we can cheerfully commend her to the patronage and favorable opinions of the public wherever she may go

NOTICES ISSUED.—Mr Habersham Superintendent of streets, served yesterday 21 notices to lay new sidewalks all on Front street in cluded in the burnt district The old partially destroyed planks and sleepers which at present are admirably adapted to breaking a leg are soon to be torn up and will be replaced by new lumber This much needed improvement will certainly receive public approbation

A SLANDEROUS JOKE.—Those of our citizens who have scrambled to the top of Mount Hood during the past summer will perhaps appreciate the following from the Salt Lake Tribune Oregonians are putting in their spare time scaling Mount Hood It is a remarkable fact that a Webfoot was never known to meet with an accident in the ascent of Hood As climbers they equal the father of mules "

HORSES TO ENTER.—At the Linn County Fair, which comes off at Albany early next month Mr Jos Welch will enter Eph Maynard and Mr Millard Lownsdale will introduce his trotter Mollie A horse of the Pathfinder stock called Put Smith and owned by Crawford Bros, Albany will also put in an appearance

LETTERS DETAINED.—The following letters are detained at the postoffice here for postage Miss Sally James C C Stewart, Black & Hyman C W Royal J Gaillard, Robert Orr James M Lowroy, Suprintendent of State Penitentiary, Edward Miller, Mrs Otway, H L Kimble, Mrs H C Benson Mrs Nason

BUOY ANCHORS.—Four large heavy cast iron buoy anchors were brought up on the last steamer These anchors were made in San Francisco, and came consigned to Major Robert They will be taken down the river soon and are to be used along the Swan Island bar in anchoring along at intervals a number of spar buoys

COUNTY COURT.—The County Court will convene on next Monday morning for the transaction of the usual county business By that time the Board of Equalization which is composed of the County Judge and Commissioners, will probably have completed its labors.

ELECTED.—Mr Ladru Royal, A B, a graduate of Willamette University and a popular teacher in Marion county has been elected to the vacancy made by the resignation of Mr S O Royal of the Portland Academy and Female Seminary

MORE CASES.—Papers for ten more cases which will be tried in the Circuit Court at the coming term, were filed yesterday in the office of the County Clerk. From present indications the docket will be quite small at the October term

PRISONERS.—There are at present 18 prisoners confined at the county jail Sixteen of these prisoners are held to answer charges of larceny, and two for forgery

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Oyster season opens this evening, Keith and the Schmeer Bros being the first to announce

A number of leading merchants commencing on the 10th prox, will close on Saturdays at one o clock P M The names appear in the advertising columns.

Carrie A Moore the Skatorial Queen has made a hit in the act known as ' Aerial Suspension ' in her skating scenes She has been to Lyons and Marseilles, and will begin an engagement in Paris on the 13th prox

"A railroad from Cornwallis, Oregon, to Yakima Bay is talked of The distance is 60 miles, and the road would connect a large agricultural area with a shipping point " The above is from the Western World published in New York It is news to the people of Oregon

POSTAL ITEMS.

A Postmaster is not required to make change in the sale of stamps

A mutilated postage stamp loses its legal value and is worthless for postal purposes

Be sure you get the proper postage on papers mailed, else they will not be sent to the written address, but be put among old papers.

It is not the duty of the Postmaster to affix stamps to mail matter, although some people imagine he or his clerks should do so

Postmasters are obliged to receive copper and nickel coins as legal tenders to the amount of four cents at each payment three-cent pieces to the amount of sixty cents, and five-cent pieces to the amount of one dollar

Revenue stamps are not recognized by post office officials. Letters bearing revenue stamps are held for postage and if not called for within the proper time are sent to the Dead Letter Office Papers are thrown in the waste basket.

OUT-DOOR SPORTS.

The much talked-of match game of base ball between the Pioneers and a picked nine from the Pacific and Clackamas clubs will take place this afternoon at two o clock As the grounds on the east side are in good condition we presume the game will be played over there As the contestants are all well picked the game will be a first class one We trust the boys will manage to get through it without any disputes which have characterized recent games in this vicinity

The Eastern championship on the 20th stood as follows

	VICTORIES	DEFEATS
Baltimore	[illegible]	14
Philadelphia	7	[illegible]
Boston	11	11
Athletic	18	1[illegible]
Mutual	1[illegible]	1[illegible]
Atlantic	11	1[illegible]

PERSONAL.

Mr F A Strong son of Judge Strong of this city is expected home very soon from the East This young gentleman left here nearly two years ago and has very recently graduated at the Law School at Albany New York He will enter into the practice of law on his arrival at Portland

BUSINESS NOTICES.

EPICURES think of it The Schmeer Bros announce in to day s paper the opening of the oyster season at their cosy parlors They know how to prepare a dish of the delicious bivalves and those who desire a rare treat will do well to drop in and order a dish this evening or any time it is convenient

SOME people may become excited over the [illegible] of the Northern Pacific Railroad on Puget Sound but it does not disturb Beck & Waldman corner Front and Washington streets in the least as they intend to pursue the usual course to their customers and that is to sell goods at prices which will enable those with limited means to provide themselves with good clothing at a very small outlay of money Parents should bring their children to this house for neat fitting suits

TIME TRIES ALL THINGS and has proved that DR WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is the remedy par excellence for the cure of coughs colds croup whooping-cough bronchitis asthma phthisic sore throat and influenza It cures coughs and colds in a trice It soothes the irritated part It heals the inflammation and even consumption itself yields to its magic influence

VANCOUVER ITEMS.

A friend from Vancouver furnishes us with the following items

The work on the Convent is progressing rapidly the walls of the first story being nearly completed

Work on the Government wharf will soon commence when with the other improvements in progress, Vancouver will present a lively aspect

A meeting of the officers of the Clarke County Agricultural Society is called for the 29th to make arrangements for their annual fair to be held early in October

Fritz son of Jacob Proebstel Esq died last Wednesday at his father's residence seven miles from the city He was buried on Thursday, a large number of persons from Vancouver attending the funeral

The crops in Clark county were never finer than they are this season Much of the grain is already harvested which indicates a large yield As there was at least one-third more ground sown than last year farmers anticipate better times coming

TO THE PUBLIC.

We are now getting on the way a new and fresh stock of fine furniture which will be superior in quality and newer in design than the one destroyed by the fire and which we will offer for sale on advantageous terms Meanwhile we are well prepared to supply the present demand from our temporary location corner of Fifth and Taylor streets near the U S Custom House Respectfully

Joe Murphy whom many of our oldest citizens will remember is playing the drama of Help at Shiels Opera House San Francisco

Leeds Panorama of [illegible] is being played to the admiring gaze of the Puget Sounders It will be back again in time for the fair

The public are requested to bear in mind that Madame Bishop and troupe will give a matinee performance this afternoon at Masonic Hall at 2 o clock A new programme is announced

The Rosedale Troupe are still in the city We have not learned anything relative to their future movements but we presume they will appear at Oro Fino Theater after the present attractions have gone away

A daylight excursion and basket picnic to the Cascades will take place next Saturday The splendid steamer Oneonta is chartered for the occasion and will leave this city at 7 A M The Twenty third Infantry Band will furnish the music and the proceeds will be applied to the building fund of St Luke s Church Vancouver

Last evening Madam Bishop the world renowned cantatrice gave at Masonic Hall the first of her series of concerts The large hall was crowded with a very select and appreciative audience who throughout the evening warmly applauded the gems of song with which they were entertained Madam Bishop s voice retains all the richness, and warmth of tone for which her singing has so justly rendered her famous among every nation where the power of music is felt and acknowledged Her mezzo-voce singing is still superb her upper notes clear sweet and resonant her scales and shakes brilliant and facile

The entertainment last evening opened with a piano solo by Mr Frank Gilder Too complimentary terms cannot be employed in the mention of Mr Gilder as a pianist His execution on this difficult instrument is a marvel Under his lightning touch the music ripples forth as if touched by a master unseen hand He is without question the most rapid and brilliant performer who has yet visited Portland As an accompanist of Madam Bishop and a solo player only a little more expression added to his wonderful mechanical dexterity would make him a second Thalberg At the conclusion of the solo Mr Gilder was compelled to come before the audience and give them another specimen of his extraordinary powers while presiding at the piano In addition to accompanying the singers during the evening's performance Mr Gilder played a transcription of his own from Il Trovatore' in the first part and the nocturne 'Silver Spring and 'First Grand Concert Polka,' by W V Wallace, and in each he held the audience entranced Music with this performer is not a succession of harmonious sounds arranged by scientific methods but a language by which the soul speaks to kindred souls.

Madame Bishop more than realized public expectations raised by a reputation which has preceded her coming Her songs from the operas of "Linda di Chamounix" (A luce di Quest Anima), "L Elixir d Amore," were magnificent specimens of cultured vocalization The ballads sung by Madame Bishop were musical gems of the purest water, and [illegible] applauded She was encored in each piece rendered—frequently twice We venture that the audience have heard a more sweet, touching, pathetic rendering of ' Home, Sweet Home,' than Madame Bishop gave last evening To hear her sing that ballad is alone worth the price of admission

Mr Gottschalk possesses a robust baritone voice, excellently cultivated, not remarkably musical of itself, but with Madame Bishop's it blends into such soft, harmonious strains as to charm the ear He sang with marked success Cavatina Infelici "Ernani," ' The Heart Bowed Down," and also two duets with Madame Bishop. He won several hearty and well earned encores

Mr Alfred Wilkie is a tenor of very considerable merit His voice bears evidence of a fair measure of native gift combined with much patient culture but appears to be rather thin and delicate He has a careless off hand style which takes well with an audience His singing is very good in the main and was received with evidences of appreciation His best efforts last evening appeared in the selections of 'Come Into the Garden Maud How So Fair, from the opera of Martha, My Pretty Jane and others The closing performance was the laughing trio Vadasi via di qua ' in which Madame Bishop Messrs Gottschalk, Wilkie and Gilder appeared

COLEMAN'S EUCALYPTUS

Dr. J. S. Coleman's Compound Extract of Eucalyptus is a preparation combining all the valuable medical qualities of the Eucalyptus which is cultivated in nearly every California garden for [illegible] having become the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER and URINARY ORGANS, and SEMINAL WEAKNESS It seems to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY ORGANS and their surroundings and cures [illegible] by its alterative healing and balsamic properties more effectually than any other known remedy

It is an invaluable remedy for all [illegible] of the mucous and [illegible] such as [illegible], HACKING COUGH NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY DYSPEPSIA, LEUCORRHŒA, etc.

This preparation is the result of Dr Coleman s experiments with the medicinal properties of the tree in the U S Marine Hospital in San Francisco in 1871 and 1872, where he had unusual facilities for testing the various methods of preparing the remedy and its uses. It can be relied upon as [illegible] to give the promised results and hundreds of testimonials of its efficacy can be seen at his office, [illegible] street, San Francisco.

COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS is a powerful cathartic, a febrifuge and is a special preparation for the treatment of the malarious fevers of our interior valleys and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE treated with it according to directions while the baneful results of the usual Quinine and [illegible] remedies of those diseases are entirely avoided.

SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 30 1873

THE GENTLEMAN FROM SAND-CREEK

[From the Kansas Magazine.]

Quincy Adams is a man who has changed [illegible] I knew him first ten years ago. The only thing about him which it seems to me remains unchanged is that which he probably wishes had changed first, to wit the color of his hair [illegible] genial kind [illegible] with a generous admiration for all women which does credit to his heart, but the reason, he has informed me why he has not been able to concentrate the best acts of his life [illegible] of a virtuous and kindly like upon one woman [illegible]. Honest and [illegible] with a fair knowledge of men and books he has still been unsuccessful in his profession, and knowing no other reason for it he thinks it [illegible] of the outside. He [illegible] in a city and has improved him [illegible] smallest and poorest of inland villages. His head is his drawback and has the effect of making him awkward and diffident among men who are much his inferiors in genuine honesty and general attainments. When he stood at the head of his class in college and was the champion debater of the Union Literary Society, and carried away prizes for declarations of the old Roman sort, his companions still reviled him as the Gentleman from Sand Creek, and affirmed that if he should sit astride the top rail of one of the zig-zag fences common through all the Pike region of a sunny morning, the woodpeckers would come and feed him as a fledgling of their own. One of the unfortunate circumstances which attended him there was the fact that two or three others of his companions bore the historic name of Adams, and they had not red heads, and when the question was asked, which Adams, the answer would be—why, Peckerwood Adams of course.

After we lost sight of Quincy's radiant head in the smoke of the great war, he was almost forgotten through the ten years before mentioned. We remembered him, it is true, sometimes, as one whose hat always lacked harmony with that which it sat upon, whose coats were always of an unbecoming pattern, no matter when or where purchased, and whose knees seemed to be prominent points of an incongruous tout ensemble. Ten years is a long time, and as the forty and one came and went with all their thrills and pangs, a thousand faces and ten thousand thoughts had come between. But one day I looked across the street and studied for the hundredth time the sunshine loungers, and the gilt signs and the statuesque pose of the leaden Modoc who has stood harmless for many months in front of a cigar-shop, with his leaden club uplifted in his hand and the leaden tiger at his feet, when suddenly somebody came between. It was somebody who looked straight to the front and swung himself along with the ease of a practiced pedestrian, but there was something wrong with his coat, and something in bad taste about the color of his hat and al[illegible] me to run up and follow him. And as I followed the ardor of the chase grew upon me, and I ran. There was dimly before me the embodied token of all the fun I ever had in those rosy days when there was no duty, no care, no struggle, nothing but youth and hope. The thirty-seventh theorem rose before my eyes, with all its angular difficulty, and the sweet Virgilian lines, the beauty of which lingers with us not alone for their own melody's sake, but because they were learned in youth, came into my mind again. It was Quincy Adams fleeing before me, and I overtook and passed him, and planted myself impudently in his path. As he stopped, astonished there came into his face the look of a man accustomed to be put upon, and his first unconscious movement consisted in feeling the hair upon the back of his head under his hat-rim, as questioning if too much exposure of color there had got him into trouble from behind. But soon there came into the lines of his plain, honest face a pleased expression, and I captured and carried him away, he walking amicably beside me, concentrating all pleasure and surprise into one expression, "Well—I do declare!"

But after all he seemed to have not much to remember or talk about. He was as shy as though he had never seen me before. I rattled on about everything I could think of in the way of names and places and a bright remembrance or [illegible] seemed to strike him occasionally, but he didn't get anything fairly [illegible]. I [illegible], and played upon his school-day [illegible], and the only looked regretful and remained silent. Knowing the usual effect of the weed, I offered him a cigar, but he declined, he had not learned to smoke, he said. When asked where he lived, he said "at Greensburg," and further questioning only revealed the fact that it was a village of three hundred people somewhere in Iowa. Then he remarked that he wanted to walk and would let him go thinking that he wished to think it all over, and would come back and talk after a while.

When he did return, the May sunset behind the clouds had burned out its hidden splendors, and the lamps were lit in the street. He sat down and placed his feet upon the window ledge. Said he "Where's Bones?"

This was the first question that was asked and opened an inexhaustible theme. Bones was a room-mate in the old time, amid circumstances worth explaining. He was so named because he was the "end-man" of the party, besides being the daily author of a hundred harmless pieces of buffoonery. The system of social economy under which three students live, has been recalled and smiled at thousands of times by men who seem to have forgotten all else that pertains to youth. It was in the land of beech woods, mud, tropical heats and Arctic cold. There was a large room and a tremendous bed, a common table and lamp, and piles of books. In the admirable system organized by us, Adams must cut the wood, I must carry it, and Bones must make the fires. Such was the law which frequently thrust the latter gentleman out into the cold and dark of five o'clock of a winter's morning, the compulsory force being two pairs of feet applied to the hinder region of the duty shirker.

When Adams here asked the question these scenes arose [illegible], and though I replied that I knew nothing whatever of Bones the talk went on. He told how he had seen Roberts fall forward on his face at Chaplain Hills and how Walters had become an accomplished scoundrel, and had stolen and forged and languished alternately for these many years. His mine of memories was unsealed and he narrated how McClure and Patterson had become preachers and the tones in which the former whined and the latter growled in their limited sphere of usefulness. He had been back once, he said and the old college town lay quieter than ever, with its homely spires and discordant bells, and its phalanx of dear old maids, jilted years ago by students long lost in the mazes of a larger world than theirs. He described how changed in after years seems the spot in which was written and sung the idyl of the school boy. The yellow lamp-light shone upon his face as he spoke and the rain fell in torrents and trickled down the panes and as I looked upon him I thought of the strangeness of the fact that the mate of a dingy room and a quiet world ten years ago should appear again amid scenes so different, and wondered that in his comical garments he brought no smell of wood violets and on his face no flush of boyish debate. He seemed older than he ought as he sat there and if the world he lived in had been different from the future of which we once had dreamed together. I waited until he should tell of it and of himself. But as the time passed and he still avoided egotism I was impelled to ask him of his adventures. When he mentioned the mature damsels who had been so fresh and blooming to him and me a decade ago he had stopped and sat thinking and by and by I said "You are not married, Adams?"

"Oh no," said he, and looked up quickly.

This marrying is a curious business, he presently ventured, which profound remark I assented to and he went on.

"You remember [illegible] [illegible] well he was [illegible] with the sex there with his ambrosial locks and his w[illegible]ness and for years after that he was heard of occasionally as [illegible] [illegible] married a [illegible] with whom he quarrels every day. He had better have [illegible] the farmer's daughter who [illegible] him so steadfastly in the old days."

As he went on telling of the success or failure of one or another and condemning the truthfulness of women and the faithlessness of men as exemplified in these familiar instances, the stress he laid upon these things seemed to me to forcibly suggest himself as an opposite. "How is it with you?" I said finally.

My companion looked at me curiously and I distinctly and seemed to suspect that it [illegible] [illegible]

"I have not heard of you for all these years please explain what you seem to imagine I ought to know."

"Ah, you must remember her well enough."

He replied—w[illegible]

I perceived that Adams had been waiting all this time upon a diffident man's [illegible] self. He imagined that his very thoughts were commented upon by others. "Tell me all about it," he said.

Then he mentioned a name which fell [illegible] Mary Airey [illegible]. And even then I could not remember that my friend Adams was in any way more intimately connected with a [illegible]

"Yes, she [illegible] for I'm not certain of that, after all, I have any right to speak of her as a man speaks of one who has had much to do with his life. Even when I sought her company and tried [illegible] her in my awkward and [illegible] sort of way, somebody else always came and carried her off when they wished to. But I'll begin at the beginning. I don't know so well what was the matter with me then as I know now. A man in this life is the victim of a very first circumstance over which he has no control. I was born in Egypt—in the very midst of the Pikes. Awkwardness, peculiarity of person and a dialect which the schools can never cure were my inheritances. Often as I ploughed corn in the bottoms of Sand Creek I have thought all these things over before I ever saw you or attained half my stature. I know I am honest and passably capable but every body knows how better things may come to a man in this life than have ever come to me and leave still clinging to him something to be laughed at. With gifts and graces and polish which will bear the closest inspection at all times, it is a pity that some men should be the poor devils in soul that they really are, but they pass well through the world and get most there is. For all that. When I think of the Sand Creek region I'm choked. Beech woods are no more the tutors of refinement now than they were when the Indians lived among them. Do you know there are people in that region worth a hundred thousand dollars and the very last time I was there, I saw them unload their large families by the broken fences of the country church yard, from old and unpainted lumber wagons? Some of those old codgers had been wheedled into the purchase of a piano for their daughters before I came and there was still high indignation about it among the neighbors. And those girls!—now you know there is nothing else in this world so sweet as a girl—they are pretty enough in calico if it only fits them, but in Egypt it don't, and they never know it. They eat with their knives and their fingers, and can catch a colt in the woods pasture, and climb a high fence much easier and more quietly than you can. One does not like to see a woman too competent in these things. Then, they laugh and talk loudly, and every acquaintance is an intimate one. You may think I am hard on my kith and kin but all this is true and they can never rid themselves of their peculiarities. We won't mention the men, but they are just like me, and none of us can help it, it is born in us. My name is Adams; it is plain to me that the other families of that name are totally distinct from ours. I understand that my grandfather had a red head and that with other things remains in the blood of this branch of the family."

"Why do you think so?" I asked, somewhat vaguely, at this stage of his discourse.

"Because a family even a generation becomes the product of a mere locality. Low lying fields, sedgy growths, soil rich in vegetable deposit and the mysterious something which produces ague, also produce peculiar men and women. Had I been born amid rugged hills, or, better in a city, I might have been a well dressed man."

I thought my friend had lost and perhaps totally forgotten what he had started out to narrate. So I recalled him to his story of something connected with Mary Airey.

"It all belongs together," he said. "The reason why I did not marry—her lies as I have all along thought, in the facts I have been narrating. She was a town girl you know and I was first attracted to her because she seemed to walk so daintily, and because her hat seemed to suit her complexion, and her dresses seemed to hang,—is that what they call it?—so nicely. After admiring her at a distance for a long time, I ventured to take her to the mite society, and afterward to church. I was twenty years old then, and I finally arrived at the point of calling upon her in the parlor. She played the piano whether well or ill, I'm sure I don't quite know. But one thing she sang often,—a thing the words of which have been running in my head ever since. It was new then. 'Come rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer' comprised the first line."

I smiled when my friend arrived at this point, for the whole scene came back to me more plainly than Adams could have painted it. The large frame house, the open window, and the voice and the words which came floating out through it and fell upon the ears of the loitering students who passed by, while the red beams broke through the forest leaves half a mile away and touched our faces with the broken lances of a sunset which in these regions, nobody ever fully saw. A late June afternoon in a country town the air full of peace and honeysuckle-odors remembered now amid a thousand noises and intervening scenes, by virtue of the simple melody of a worn-out song. Oh girlish singers! oh sweet voiced matrons! if after years you would wield again the soft sceptre you once held over forgetful lover or grown up son, do but touch him with the songs of his youth.

"And," continued Adams again flushing, "I used to think she liked me a little. Many a time have I been there when you and Bones thought I was somewhere else. But I was always afraid she did it. Other fellows came and went, and I never thought of doing aught to hinder them. She was just so placid always,—just so kind. I lent her books and I'm sure she read them through. Months and months passed, and during all the time I cannot recall anything but kindness from her hands. But she thought me homely and awkward—I know she did—and I never said anything particular to her you know. I was afraid to. Well, when the Class enlisted we all left the town, as you remember, at 8 o'clock in the morning, to catch the train on the railroad 20 miles away. Half an hour before, I sauntered—sneaked, you might say,—past the house. I wanted to look at it, or at something before we went away. The same window was open and I could dimly see what I knew must be her figure sitting by it. I stopped and I remember thinking it was the boldest thing I had ever done. To my surprise she came out and down the steps and stood by me upon the inside of the white washed fence. She did not say one word, nor did I. But I thought—perhaps I'm mistaken—but I thought that in the starlight I could see something like dew in her eyes. She looked not at me but up the street and after I had been there about a minute saying nothing and not knowing what to say, it began to be very awkward. Finally I said, Well I must go—or something like that and she held out her hand to say good bye, and the last I saw of her as I looked back she was standing on the steps looking, perhaps after me as I went away. But one thing I must tell you which I hardly noticed at the time but have often thought of since—as I stood there she held the hem of my coat sleeve between her thumb and finger as my arm lay upon the board. I saw it all the time for the fingers were white and when I moved my arm at last to go she did not release it and the last thing I remember was the little pull I felt at my sleeve."

Then this adventurer relapsed into silence with his head bent and his eyes away off [illegible] perhaps for the thousandth time [illegible] what there was in that last parting which made him remember it so well.

"Is that all?" I said.

"Nearly, but I must tell you that when we got into camp at Muldraugh's Hill, in Ken[illegible] fellow [illegible] was full of the [illegible] soldiering and the memories of the [illegible] forsaken—though we did not then know it at [illegible] one of them seemed to have a [illegible] my fancy and teased me. By and by [illegible] to go back. Quit[illegible] they said and that [illegible] to know [illegible] [illegible] most of the time but I wrote not a word and before I was aware of it six months were gone and [illegible] I knew the chances were that I was forgotten. You think all this very strange. Well I wanted [illegible] I didn't want to make a fool of myself with that girl—I thought [illegible] time.

"Two years afterward I went back. That was [illegible] [illegible] relatives there then and I hadn't been back to the farm on Sand Creek yet. I was tired, worn and perpetually hungry. [illegible] hotel had the best larder and the softest beds I think I ever saw. [illegible] the tri-weekly mail. I stayed in the little [illegible] room all the afternoon. My face was very brown and [illegible] I looked at the cracked mirror [illegible] the wall [illegible] and wondered why I had been such a fool as to come back [illegible]

"While I sat there thinking, and wishing I had not come on my fool's errand at all I heard voices and laughter almost beneath my window. Two persons, a man and a woman in white dress passed slowly along the narrow walk in front. He was tall, handsome and [illegible] with a shoulder strap upon which I could see the white eagle of his rank. I looked down at my plain blue blouse and the contrast as it would appear to a woman struck me with an additional pang. [illegible] I did not know but in the face that looked up to his just once I discovered the placid features of Mary Airey. They passed by and I heard their voices as they grew small in the distance. He bent low to her ear and she looked up in his face.

"My friend I knew then that the errand upon which I had come was a foolish one, so foolish indeed that I was ashamed that it had ever occurred to me. My name, my appearance, and my rank were all against me prima facie, and this new man with his good looks and his shoulder straps was, in war time, a crusher. I got away from the place that night and have never returned. Whenever by chance I look into a mirror I am satisfied with the reason why. I now inform you that when I feel old age creeping on I shall hail him with all his rheumatic decrepitude as a friend—because there is a chance of my growing gray."

It was nine o'clock. My friend took up his hat and changed his position into one which indicated departure and I perceived that he had told his story. Nevertheless I saw around the corners of his mouth the same droll expression which he had habitually worn ten years before.

"Wait," said I. "I'll go with you if you'll stay ten minutes longer. Haven't you any later experiences?"

"Yes I have. I think this State of yours over which I have been wandering, is remarkable for something besides beauty or prospective wealth or rapid progress, or political chicanery."

"How?" said I.

"Is it the omnium gatherum of all creation. People come here from the ends of the earth, and, I should judge, most of them stay and multiply."

"That is a fact," said I, "but how came you to know it so well?"

The smile spread wider still over my friend's homely visage. "Wait till I tell you," said he. "This afternoon I met a slow-going wagon in the road. I will describe it all to you minutely, for it was impressed upon my mind. One old horse was gray and the other I should say, lacked a shade of being any defined color at all. In point of condition they were not a great credit to your State's productiveness and the wagon behind them was an unpainted and dilapidated vehicle. Upon a board in front sat a man driving. He was long, lean and leaned indolently forward with his elbows upon his knees and clucked industriously to his team. I might not have noticed all this, but for a peculiarity of his which seldom escapes me—he had red hair. Something caused me to stop this caravan and inquire the way to your town. Something I say because I did not need any information of the kind, when I could see your Capitol or whatever it is, in the distance. In the short conversation which ensued I perceived that I had met, as it were, my brother, for my ear detected in all its fullness and richness the almost forgotten dialect of the Pikes. In the wagon box behind, [illegible] in straw I saw a woman and three small children. The hair of two of the children was red. Now, I'm going to tell you something strange. In that brief moment of purposeless conversation my heart warmed to this squatter's wife with a thrill and the great revelation of my life came to me with a pang, and—too late." My friend here took up his hat and approached the door, and while I sat listening and wondering he turned with his hands on the latch to say "And I know now that I was mistaken as few men are—in an underestimate of myself. I might have had her for the asking. Good night."

He was half way down the stairs when I reached the door. I called after him "Hold on! Who was she?"

Up from the depths of rain and darkness on the street landing came the answer.

"It was MARY AIREY."

SMALL POX.

DOCTOR BORZEAU'S SMALL POX REMEDY. SAMUEL CORWIN, Proprietor, can be procured at all the Drug Stores in this city at the present time. As this medicine is proving an inestimable boon to those afflicted with that disease, no person should neglect the present opportunity of providing themselves with this valuable antidote. Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

Portland Oregon, Aug 22 1873.

MR. SAMUEL CORWIN—Sir: In justice to yourself and for the benefit of those who may be afflicted with the small pox I am induced to give publicity to the following facts. About the 30th of July 1873 I became very unwell, having severe pain in my back and limbs which continued to increase in severity for three or four days, a very high fever [illegible] and I began to break out on my face, neck and body with what proved to be small pox. I procured of Dr Freeland of the Central Drug Store a bottle of your small pox remedy. Notwithstanding the severity of the attack I administered the medicine myself not in accordance with accompanying directions. But in about double doses. In three days all pain and fever disappeared. My recovery was extremely rapid notwithstanding frequent exposures by moving about from place to place while in a high fever, which is generally considered fatal in that disease, and it is my firm conviction that under the ordinary treatment for that disease I would not be living to day. I took of the medicine about two and a half bottles, more perhaps than was necessary, not wishing to discontinue until a thorough cure was effected.

PETER BURK.

I know of my own knowledge that the foregoing statement is true in every particular.

F. G. FREELAND.
